

CANADIANS DIG DEEPER INTO THE SIEGFRIED LINE'S OUTER DEFENSES; OVERRUN MORE THAN DOZEN TOWNS; ONLY 4 MILES FROM CLEVE, ANCHOR OF NAZI WESTWALL

Charge Toward Rhine In Wake of Gigantic Artillery Barrage

UP 84TH DIVISION

Russians Racing Toward Stettin in Drive to Isolate Northeast Berlin

By International News Service
The First Canadian Army dug deeper into the Siegfried Line's outer defenses today, overrunning more than a dozen towns in a dash to within less than four miles of Cleve, fortified anchor of the Nazi Westwall.

Tightening their grip on the Siegenwald Forest west of Cleve,
British and Canadian troops plunging toward the Rhine in the wake of gigantic artillery barrages and forceful assaults cut up the entire German 84th Infantry Division in their savage sweep. Allied headquarters announced.

The smash from the Netherlands,
designed to topple the entire northern end of the Siegfried Line, already has overrun a third of the Siegenwald Forest, according to a Russell report.

Indications of mounting enemy resistance to the blow at the wavering German defenses in the west were seen in reports that the Nazi High Command was pouring reinforcements into the area menaced
by the British and Dominion troops of the Canadian Army.

Business Girls Aid In Entertaining Servicemen

A meeting of Bristol Business
Girls' Club was held Thursday evening in Bristol Methodist Church.
Mrs. James Patton, president, Miss Dorothy Everett, devotional
chairman, had charge of Scripture reading and prayer. Miss Ellen Allagher read the minutes. Miss Athena Dugan gave the treasurer's report.

Miss Stella Mama read the club
correspondence; Miss Theresa Perry, Sunshine Chairman, reported having sent flowers and cards
to sick members; Miss Doris Vasey, child welfare chairman and her committee are making plans for a St. Patrick's dance to be given for the teen-age friends of members.

Mrs. Charles Peet who will give the "Women of Tomorrow" cooking lessons, outlined her course, which will start in March. This will run for a series of six weeks.
Twenty girls have already signed up for the course.

Dr. John Robbins Hart, lecturer and consulting psychologist, will give a lecture on "Returning Servicemen" at the Bristol Methodist Church on March 21st at eight p. m.

Miss Theresa Hoffman, membership chairman, presented names of eight individuals who were accepted into the club. The girls were busy during the meeting, making valley cards for the Veterans' Hospitals.

A party of 30 or 35 Marines from the Philadelphia Navy Yard will be entertained by the group the latter part of this month at an informal dinner.

The members recently went to Fort Dix, N. J., to entertain at a buffet luncheon for convalescent service men stationed there. 100 men were served by the group. Miss Lenore Melideo and her Service Men's Committee were in charge of the affair.

The members assisted in the collection of the "March of Dimes" at the Grand and Bristol theatres.

SOVIET TANK FORCES MASS AT ODER DEFENSE LINE

Moscow—Soviet tank forces massed today at the Oder River defense line in front of the shortest route to Berlin amid indications that the mighty onslaught to force capitulation of the Reich capital is under way.
A Reuter correspondent in Moscow telephoned his London office shortly after noon to report that the first round of the battle for Berlin was launched on the lower Oder.

A reporter at the front with troops of Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's
First White Russian Army declared:
"Our tanks have moved forward to the German fortifications, to the crossings over the Oder, the place where the short and straight road leads to Berlin."

There was a general feeling in the Soviet capital that something big might be under way, with indications that a fierce struggle may be in progress across the Oder at places just east of Berlin and southeast around Breslau.

The northern wing of Zhukov's army raced ahead toward the Baltic port of Stettin in a drive to isolate all northeastern Germany as other Red Army forces participated in thrusts to smash into Berlin from Oder River bridgeheads.

Heavy Raids Made on Japan

Twenty-First Bomber Headquarters, Guam—Returning from heavy raids on targets near Tokyo, Superfortress crews reported that excellent results were obtained in clear weather over the Japanese homeland.
A Domei broadcast, recorded by the FCC said: "Approximately 90 enemy planes attacked the northern end of the Kanto district this afternoon. Some damage to ground installations was sustained."

First reports indicated that a force as large, if not larger, than any that has bombed the main island of Honshu since B-29's started their operations, took part in the attack.

At least seven elements of the powerful bomber force indicated light enemy fighter opposition was encountered, with Jap defenses seemingly confused by the latest attack against vital industrial targets.

House-to-House Fighting Rages in Manila

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Luzon—While fierce house-to-house fighting raged in the southern half of Manila today where the Japs were putting up desperate resistance, the U. S. 38th Infantry Division, driving its wedge down the Bataan Peninsula toward Mariveles reported steady advances against fierce opposition.

In flame-blackened Manila, elements of the Eleventh and 37th divisions continued to mop up in the face of terrific mortar, rocket and rifle fire from the enemy.

Pvt. Monachello Admitted To Hospital in Missouri

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 10—
Pvt. Vito Monachello, son of Mrs.
Rose Monachello, Jefferson avenue,
Bristol, Pa., was admitted to O'Reilly
General Hospital, here, recently for treatment for battle injuries received at Nancy, France.

O'Reilly General Hospital is located three miles northeast of Springfield, the capital city of the Ozark country.

The hospital was dedicated Nov.
8th, 1941, by Brigadier General
George B. Foster, Jr., the Commanding General. Originally a 1,000 bed hospital, its capacity was expanded to exceed 3,945 on 165 acres of the former beautiful Glen-stone Golf Course.

Brigadier Gen'l George B. Foster's message to patients entering the hospital is: "You are here for one purpose—to attain maximum recovery as soon as possible. We also, are here for one purpose—and that is to do anything and everything that we can to aid you in your recovery."

Will Pay Honor To Capt. George Butler

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 10—Doylestown Post No. 175, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States decided this week to honor one of Doylestown's outstanding citizens,
Captain George C. Butler, a veteran of World War No. 1.

Captain Butler is looked upon by the V. F. W. as the County Seat's outstanding example of wartime citizenship. He developed a community-wide policy of letter-writing to the local men and women in the service in all parts of the world.

A medal of honor will be struck
in his honor and presented to him.
Through his idea, at least 500 letters a week are addressed, contents furnished—including small tabloid newspapers and items from home—postage applied, and handed out to the people of the town to mail, adding a paragraph or two.
The letters are distributed at various meetings and members are asked to do the rest. Hundreds of letters of thanks have been received from the boys by Captain Butler from all parts of the world.

Captain Butler's son, Richard, leaves tomorrow for service in the armed forces. He was a three-letter athlete and star at Doylestown High this year. A daughter, Mary, is in the United States
Marine Corps Women's Reserve.

Captain Butler himself is employed by the State Highway Department
here.

PHILCO CORP. RUMOR

One war industry in this area is going to move its Croydon plant to Bristol, it was officially stated today, and according to rumor which could not be verified, a nationally-known firm is to occupy the vacated building at Croydon.

The Hunter Manufacturing Corp., which has been occupying what is known as the "Blue Moon plant" at Croydon, has been gradually vacating that place and centering its activities elsewhere. Several months ago the offices were moved from Croydon to a building on Project 1, Bristol Terrace. A "skeleton" crew has been maintained at the Croydon plant.

On and after March 1st, according to an announcement made today
by Hunter firm officials, the tool room and machine shop of the Hunter Corp. will move to Bristol.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1945

INEVITABLE HOUR

The inevitable hour has struck for Berlin. The boast of Nazi heraldry and the pomp of Nazi power have marked, at the end of the path of military glory, the graveyard of German hopes. From this center of disturbance, Berlin, they projected a curse on the world—and back to the ruins of Berlin the Nazi curse now is being turned.

The fall of Berlin at this stage of Nazi military reverses could mark the end of the war for Germany, but it may not, for fanaticism knows no bounds. But all Germans must realize that the destruction of their national capital foreshadows that of Nazism's very last stronghold, even if it be the model subterranean hideout their gangster overlords have reserved for themselves at Berchtesgaden.

With the fall of Berlin, further resistance inside Germany will become more difficult, complicated and futile. It will have to lean largely to improvisation, for Germany has lost its snags of war in the form of manpower reserves, fuel supply sources in Rumania, the Silesian "Ruhr," East Prussian and Polish granaries and very much of its own industrial potential at home, of which ruined Berlin is a typical example.

This is the obvious truth that concerted Russian and American broadcasts are seeking to impress on the desperate Germans: "National catastrophe is inevitable if the war goes on. The rescue from total catastrophe lies in surrender."

V-E DAY PLANS

As Allied hopes rise once more for an early end of the European war, the outlook for industrial reconversion is different than it was six to nine months ago. Last summer some of the top authorities in Washington were thinking in terms of a major shift back to the production of civilian goods the moment the final defeat of Germany was assured.

Today it seems more than likely that war output will be kept near its present level for many months regardless of whether the Nazis collapse or continue their hopeless struggle.

The original plan was to cut back war production 40 per cent within a short time after V-E day. None of this kind of talk is coming from War Production Board officials now. The present estimate is that reconversion and cutbacks in military output will be "very slight and very slow" to start with. Cutbacks for the first six months are not expected to exceed 15 per cent and it is considered possible that military production will not drop more than 20 per cent until Japan is defeated.

These new estimates may turn out to be as over-pessimistic in the course of time as the original ones were over-optimistic. But they are predicated on a number of facts not altogether unfavorable in themselves. The most important is the unexpected rapid progress which has been made in the Pacific war.

GUEST SPEAKERS TO BE AT CHURCHES HERE

Miss Lelia B. Taylor To Speak in Harriman Methodist Edifice

CALVARY, L. TALBOT

Guest speakers are scheduled for Harriman Methodist Church and Calvary Baptist Church on the morning.

Local church services of worship and schedule of week-day meetings follow:

Harriman Methodist Church

Sunday will be marked as "Crusade Sunday," and in keeping with the theme "Crusade for Christ" each service will emphasize some phase of the Crusade. The main service will begin at eight p. m. with a special program. There will be fine singing, and an address by Miss Lelia B. Taylor, Philadelphia. Miss Taylor has had a wealth of experience. At one time she was executive secretary of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. In that office, her duties took her all over America to the many Home Mission Fields. Miss Taylor has long been active in Children's work in her home church. At present she is the superintendent of the Frankford Day Nursery.

Sunday School will meet at 10 a. m.; with special program on the Crusade—at 11:15 a. m. Morning worship will be centered in the theme, "Here Is Your Cross." The Methodist Radio Hour is on at four p. m., the speaker will be the lay leader of the Philadelphia Conference, John Carson.

Senior Youth Fellowship, 6:30 p. m., and Intermediate Youth Fellowship at 7:15 p. m., will hold discussions on race relations.

At the close of the evening service there will be a meeting of the official board. THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Word Came From Russia

Washington, Feb. 10. NO WONDER the strange and confusing currents of American domestic politics baffle the foreigner who attempts to understand them. We ourselves cannot intelligently explain the conflicting elements within the two great parties, or clearly define a principle which divides them, or analyze the ties that hold them together.

FOR EXAMPLE, there is the illogical, continuous support of Mr. Roosevelt, for whose New Deal it has strong distaste, of a South solidly Democratic largely because the Republicans formerly were the recognized party of the Negroes, long after the President had made the Negroes Democratic. That, perhaps, is the most conspicuous example of inconsistency and unintelligence, but there are others almost equally surprising and nearly as difficult to explain. One of these has developed in the present fight over the "work or fight" bill passed by the House and now pending in the Senate committee.

THIS is the United States national service bill which the chiefs of staffs and the President urge as essential to the war effort. It has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate. While the National Association of Manufacturers opposes the really effective opposition comes from CIO and AFL labor leaders. Mr. Philip Murray and Mr. William Green. By these the bill is regarded as a plan for "labor slavery" and the radical press of New York violently assails it as the "work or jail" bill. These have put themselves in full opposition to the Commander in Chief, whom they supported, and the united military and naval heads.

BUT WHOM do we find now galloping to the rescue of the "work or fight" bill? Whom do we find leading the Army and Navy and against the professional labor bosses? Who is it who now says that this "labor slavery" stuff is all nonsense and that "work or fight" is right? Why none other than the Communists. That's who. Mr. Browder and his doughty band of brothers have made it plain that they disagree with the CIO and AFL chiefs. They have further made it plain that the CIO is by no means a unit behind Mr. Murray's position. On the contrary, CIO Communist-dominated unions are making it known in Congress that they are for, not against, the "work or fight" proposal. The Daily Worker has daily editorials denouncing its passage, and Representative Vito Marcantonio, the only Communist in the House, voted and spoke for the bill.

COMMENDABLE as it is, this is a strange and unexpected split. Here, before the Communists have worked with the labor bosses, supported them, sometimes dominated them, sided with them in following about "labor's rights," but never opposed them on a clean-cut issue. There is at least a plausible explanation of why they are doing it on this issue. Regardless of their earnest protestations of complete independence, Communist policy in this country is still made in Moscow. Russia believes that a labor draft will help this country to fight the war more effectively and bring about the German collapse more quickly. This is the immediate and urgent Russian goal. Hence Russia is for a labor draft, work or fight law for Americans. Hence, American Communists, refusing to follow the lead of the American labor bosses, line up behind the President and military authorities for the bill.

IF THERE is any other explanation of the Communist stand on this matter it has not been suggested. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Liberal party of New York, which gave Mr. Roosevelt some 300,000 votes last November, thus accounting for his majority in that State, is strongly against the bill. While the Communist-dominated American Labor party, which gave him more than 400,000, favors it—as indicated by Mr. Marcantonio's vote. It is curious in this vital matter Mr. Roosevelt should find his most ardent and eloquent advocates of the last campaign, his most violent opponents now. While support comes from the Communist element for which his campaign propagandists were constantly apologizing or ignoring.

IT ALL goes to show that politics in these United States is a very queer beast, indeed. One never can tell how a supporting group or faction or party is going to act after an election. In this case, the Communists, for their own reasons, are helping in a good cause. Word came from Russia. Russia is for our work or fight law because that is the way to hit Hitler hard and quick. Russia is for anything that does that. And so are the American Communists who, now as before, get their policy from Russia. That is the party line—anything to beat Hitler. They would be for any measure no matter how conservative or constructive that does that. But that does not mean they have fundamentally changed nor that their effort in the future or in the past, will not be to promote the economic chaos in this country out of which communism has so often arisen.

9:45 a. m., Church School session, Woman's Bible Class taught by Miss Annie M. Heritage; Men's Bible Class taught by William H. Thompson; graded classes for children; 11 a. m., divine worship, the Rev. W. E. Preston Haas will preach on the subject, "The Right Attitude Toward God and Man"; music by both the junior and senior choirs directed by Miss Winifred V. Tracy.

Seven p. m., Methodist Youth Fellowship and the Young Adult group will meet separately for discussion of contemporary religious and social problems; 7:30 p. m., joint meeting of both young people's groups for an old fashioned song service, followed by devotions conducted by the pastor, at eight o'clock a social hour will be held.

Eternal God and Everlasting Father, we rejoice that from age to age thou art the same. Great is thy faithfulness, O Lord! Thou art worthy to receive honor and praise. May we offer unto Thee our sacrifices of praise continually.

Dear Father, help our leaders of government and those of our Allies not to make the mistake of the last war in that the Prince of Peace was left outside of the Peace Table and Pact. Only as He is reigning and ruling in the hearts of men will there be a lasting peace. May the Church of the Living God awaken to her world task of making disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things commanded by Him. God bless our native land, and may she long be free. For Jesus' sake, we pray. Amen.

BUNNIES MOVE STEP CLOSER IN LEAGUE RACE

Bristol High Five Defeats
Bensalem in Game
Here

FINAL SCORE IS 39 TO 19

The Third Consecutive Win
For Bunnies This Season

CORNWELL HEIGHTS, Feb. 10.—Coach Harold Stackhouse's Bristol High quintet moved a step closer to the Lower Bucks County championship by scoring an easy 39-19 victory over Bensalem High here last night.

It was the third straight league victory for the Bunnies and also their ninth win of the season. They have been beaten six times. Bensalem, Fallington and Morrisville, the other clubs in the Lower Bucks circuit have all dropped two games.

A shift from the man-to-man to the zone defense practically accounted for Bristol's win. In the first period, the tilt was nip-and-tuck with Bensalem taking a 7-6 lead. But Bristol went to town in the second quarter and took the edge, 17-12. Bensalem could not penetrate the zone defense in the third period and a field goal by Dossbauer was its only scoring as Bristol went ahead, 29-14.

Howard Keyes was high scorer for the Bunnies as he made four double-deckers and a trio of fouls. Jack Hansen's nine points made him high man for the Owls.

"Bill" Bartholomew's Bristol Jay Vees added another win to its list by swamping Bensalem's Junior Varsity, 44-32. It was Bristol's eighth victory in nine starts.

Bristol had to fight up-hill to win the contest as the Owls piled up a 12-2 lead before the junior Bunnies got started. In the third period, Bristol scored 21 points to clinch the contest.

"Dessy" DeLise was high man for the winners with 18 points.

According to a well-founded rumor which could not be officially confirmed today, the Philco Radio Corp. has purchased the "Blue Moon" plant at Croydon. It is reported that the Croydon plant will be used in connection with the Philco war activities.

Canadians Dig Deeper Into Siegfried Line's Defenses

Front line reports pointed to continuing progress of the drive which already has swept up 14 towns formerly held by the Germans in the eastern Netherlands and inside the Reich.

The latest bag included the towns of Zandpol, Neil and Leuth, astride the Netherlands-Reich frontier east of Nijmegen, Holland. Others seized were Bredeweg, at the western edge of the forest, and Frasselt, five miles west of Cleve.

British infantrymen drove into the forest toward the roadway linking Cleve and the bastion town of Gogh immediately to the south as the offensive rolled over mines, anti-tank ditches and boggy terrain in the face of mounting enemy resistance.

On Germany's eastern front, meanwhile, Russian forces raced toward the Baltic port of Stettin in a drive to isolate all northeastern Berlin, while other Red armies massed along the Oder for the final smash at barricaded Berlin.

Red smashes to within 27 miles of Stettin in Pomerania, and encirclement of the Vistula Estuary port of Elbing in East Prussia were reported by the Soviet High Command, which nevertheless maintained silence on Field Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's mighty central drive on the Reich capital.

Unofficial Moscow reports, however, declared that the final drive to engulf Berlin might begin "any minute" from what Nazi broadcasts described as an almost continuous bridgehead on the Oder's west bank before the capital.

At the same time, a German frontline correspondent reported Red spearheads within 1,000 yards of Frankfurt, Oder fortress city protecting Berlin from frontal assault.

1. Make biscuit dough, roll lightly, spread with 1/4 cup grated cheese, fold over and roll 1/4 inch thick. Spread with 1 1/2 cups seasoned mashed potatoes to which have been added 1 beaten egg, 1 tablespoon grated onion and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

2. Roll as a jelly roll. Slice rolls about 1 inch thick. Place on a greased baking sheet and bake in a hot oven (450° F.) for 25 minutes.

3. Serve biscuit rolls with creamed dried beef prepared as follows: Shred beef, melt 4 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, add beef and cook until crisp. Add 6 tablespoons flour, mix well and add 3 cups milk gradually, stirring constantly until thickened.

Acting as a secondary line of defense they landed near Oran on D-Day, occupying a nearby airfield three days later. That field and scores of others were molded by them during the following months of the Tunisian campaign. Their performance earned them a D-Day entrance into Sicily where they demonstrated their efficiency by constructing an airfield on the beach in 18 hours.

The Italian campaign found them building fields again behind the infantry as usual. Five days after the Anzio beachhead was established one company of them landed. It was almost as though their arrival had been a signal for the enemy, for from that time on they shared in the horrors of continuous bombardment that were to make "Anzio" a long-remembered name. Within four days, despite continuous ground and air bombardment, they constructed a strip, and not even the "Anzio Express" deterred them from keeping it operational throughout the long months of enemy pressure.

As a reward for Anzio these men were allowed to join in the breakthrough which took the Allies far north of Rome, building many of the airfields still being used by Allied fighter planes.

Thirty months have seen casualties, but these aviation engineers continue to build bases which spell defeat for America's enemies.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

"Such a fuss about nothing," Craig said, but winced nevertheless as I worked. "If it had been a Jap bullet—"

"You'll be dodging bullets soon enough," I commented.
"So long as I dodge 'em," he grinned.

"When do you go?"
"The end of this week."
"Nonsense!"

"I'd get up now if you'd let me."
"And start your wound bleeding."

"Okay, okay," he said but looked rebellious, so I realized I'd have to watch him.

I eased him back onto the pillow. The pain of even that slight motion brought moisture to his forehead. Well, it was just luck that the bullet had missed his heart. He relaxed and grinned a little. "The brave soldier!" he murmured, de-riding his weakness.

"You're lucky to be alive," I said impulsively. "Mr. Brent, what do you think really happened last night?"

"I don't know what to think."

"Do you think it was accident?" I persisted.

He said thoughtfully after a moment. "My father had no..." He had been about to say no enemies. He stopped and changed it. "No one would murder my father." He paused again and then went on, his eyes still closed. "My father and I had our differences. Yet we loved each other. The differences we had didn't separate us."

"I'm sure he felt as you do. I'm sure he was proud of you—"

"No," interrupted Craig quickly. "No, he wasn't proud of me. Not that I've ever done anything to make anybody proud of me."

"I meant, about your getting in to the air force. Having a son going to fight for his country."

Craig laughed a little, on an unsteady note; then explained, "You don't understand. That was one of our differences. He wasn't afraid; it isn't that. He just didn't want me to go to war."

"Why not?"

"Because he—because... Oh, it's nothing, Miss Keate."

I waited, thinking of what Craig had said—or rather had failed to say. Then he added, "It was nothing my father could help. He'd felt that way for years. And, anyway, he changed lately. Since December seventh, I mean. Since we entered the war."

He changed the subject brusquely with, "Pete will be going too. He thinks in another few weeks."

"Pete? Oh, Mr. Peter Huber."

Craig went on, moving and wincing. "Pete's been here several weeks. Came on from the coast to get into some branch of the service. He's waiting now to hear. Ouch..." he said, moving his shoulder experimentally. "What makes it hurt like that?"

"It's doing all right. No infection. Did Mrs. Brent know Pete in school, too?"

"Mrs. Brent? No." The corner of his mouth twitched. "Pete's more or less susceptible."

"Susceptible! Oh, you mean..." There wasn't anybody to mean except Alexia.

Craig yawned.

"But then..." I was struck by a sudden and far-fetched speculation. If Peter Huber had fallen madly in love with Alexia, there existed a motive for Conrad's murder.

But Craig guessed my unuttered thought. "He didn't murder my father to get Alexia! Pete's a good egg. Besides, Alexia doesn't go for him."

Which was true enough. Alexia had certainly wasted no time in making her intentions clear and they obviously had nothing to do with Peter Huber.

I put away my instrument case. After I had made Craig comfortable and was sure he was warm, I pushed aside the heavy curtains and opened the windows to air the room. It was cold, much colder than it had been the day before, with the lowering kind of gray sky that threatens snow.

The day went on quietly. District Attorney Soper went away after the talk with Craig. State Police Lieutenant Nugent vanished, too, but I believe busied himself for some time about the house. Once a policeman came to the door with an ink pad and took my fingerprints; I must say I didn't relish the little attention but did not intentionally smudge one hand as he seemed to think. The glass slipped.

He would have taken Craig's fingerprints, too, but Craig seemed asleep. I wouldn't permit rousing him. The policeman went away, and I caught a glimpse of Lieutenant Nugent down by the stairs, listening but not talking to Bevens.

The thing that worried me more than anything else was the hypodermic or rather its whereabouts. Who had it and why—and above all else what did he intend to do with it? I use "he" in a general sense; it seemed to me most likely that Maud's bright little eyes had ferreted it out. And I could do nothing; to search the place for so small an object would be difficult.

Yet if found, it would be the District Attorney's triumph and vindication.

I had begun to wonder if Dr. Chivery had forgotten that he still had a patient in the Brent house when he did finally arrive, late in the afternoon, looking at least ten years older. After I had watched him examine Craig's wound and taken a few orders, he told me to go. "Get some fresh air," he said, with a kind of glassy heartiness, looking at the corner of my cap. "You needn't come back for at least an hour. I'll stay with Craig." As I hesitated, he added, "I want to talk to him."

So I had to leave.

My room was orderly and quiet. I went through the bathroom between our rooms and knocked softly on Drue's door and, as she didn't answer, I opened it cautiously.

Drue was sleeping. The little dog, Sir Francis, lying on the edge of the bed, growled in a kind of formal way. It didn't wake Drue and I retired quietly and went for a walk.

No one was in the hall below, so we weren't then under close guard. The front door closed heavily behind me and I walked along the driveway toward the public road. The air felt moist, but it was not snowing. Duak was coming on and it was very quiet. Twenty-four hours ago I had had my first indication of smoldering tragedy and terror in that house that lay behind me.

The drive went down a long curve among clumps of evergreens. When I reached the huge stone gate-posts I stepped out briskly along the public road which wound north and west.

Somewhere along the way, Delphine, the cat, picked me up and I looked down at his battle-scarred ears and wondered what had roused him so suddenly last night. A footstep? Clothing brushing against the door? Or had it been something more tenuous even than that; an awareness of movement outside that door that was denied to merely human ears? And I wondered, too, what had struck the door so sharply and so hard. Like a hammer.

Presently, having skirted a meadow and reached a little ridge, I could see the village of Balfold about a mile or two away. Delphine decided to leave and did so, on secret feline business into the meadow where his gray body slid into the shadowy growth near at hand and vanished. Leaving me alone.

Standing on that hill, I began to think again of the means of Conrad Brent's death. The use of poison presupposed a murderer with some knowledge of drugs, accessibility to digitals, and a certain amount of ingenuity in inducing the victim to take it. And to take it before Drue had returned with her unlucky hypodermic dose... Who could?

Craig Brent had merely denied words that were suspiciously prophetic. Against this he had told a story to account for the bruise on his temple which not only sounded true but indicated a line of inquiry the police would do well to follow. And while there may be few real alibis for a poison murder, still he had been under my observation at the time Conrad was induced to take poison. He was also in a drugged state, which would have prohibited clear thinking or quick action. He had been shot the previous night. It was not likely that two potential murderers existed in their immediate circle—both intent on cutting off the Brents, root and branch.

No, I didn't think that Craig had murdered Conrad Brent. And it was true that he had done his best to divert suspicion from Drue.
